NEWS UPDATE - SNOWY SPRING BREAK Edition #1 2019

Greetings Friends & Rock Enthusiasts:

The weather here continues to be a miserable, cold, snowy, windy, winter same as most everywhere else in the U.S.A.

But that doesn't stop another tourist rock season approaching faster than a speeding bullet - the vehicle floodgates will soon open. The tourist faucet is leaking and ready to burst. Everyone in this part of the county with any kind of business, storefront, restaurant or accommodation is gearing up for the overflow tourist influx from Southern Utah's Five National Parks this year.

The National and local Utah Monument news coverage has slowed thanks to Zinke's departure and the non-recognizing Utah politicians. So, by-pass the National Parks and head to the Grand Staircase-Escalante where there is geology, hiking, camping, fishing, kicking back with plenty of room to move around. Make your reservations early and drop by the Rock Shop.

The webpage <http://www.escalanterockshop.com> was updated this winter with 90 new items and a truck from quartzite is bringing more rough and polished specimens. The shop should be teeming with rock. If you are not planning on a trip this year, what are you looking for? This season's specials include gem dinosaur bone rough/polished, coprolites, Morrison & Hubbard rough/polished petrified wood slabs. Some of the shop's 15 year rough Utah thunderegg & Mojave geode stashes are now available.

The jewelry page <http://www.susankayjewelry.com> has some new rare and signed items. Too many to mention. Check it out.

Thanks to all who still read & trash these (1-2) yearly news update (s) and opt-not to drop off the list, our regular customers, collectors & suppliers who keep us wandering around the desert looking for treasures and the season doors open.
